PIANO SATISFACTION

There is satisfaction in knowing that when you purchase a piano you are getting a first class instrument. But that isn't all. No one likes to feel that they have paid perhaps $100 or $150 more than they should, and yet such things occur every day. You can always have the satisfaction of knowing that you are getting a first-class instrument at the right price when you buy it of us. Our "one price system" protects you absolutely, as it eliminates every possibility of double dealing or of tricky juggling with price.

"UNDER TWO FLAGS."

It is doubtful if there is any person in this or any other intelligent American city who has not at some stage or other of the novel reading stage devoured with insatiable interest Ouida's great book of color and dramatic interest, "Under Two Flags," a dramatization of which will be given by the Pull summer stock company as the next week's bill at the Jacques. For some years past it has been the fashion in pseudo-literary circles to pooh-pooh everything that Ouida has done with the result that, allowing for the wear and tear of time, the demand for "Under Two Flags" is almost greater today than on its publication, and much greater than its circulation.

grounds of criticism, moral, psychological and constructional. Its gorgeous coloring has been called gaudy and its wretched taste, its plot weak and after the fashion of the "Duchess," Bertha M. Clay, and other sturdy standbys of the seaside library. Its sentimentality, its situations clap trap and its tragic denouement the rankest kind of melodrama. In spite of all this and the fact that it has been Boccaccio's "Decamerone," MacMonnies' "Rachante" and some other artistic things a headline feature at the most conspicuous literary auto-da-fes of the Boston free public library the youth with the red blood, the maiden with the romantic yearnings, and all those who like strength and vividness, have fought with the black browed "Chassons d'Afrigue," have wept at the unhappy ending of poor Cigarette and groined wrathily over the persecutions of Bertie Cecil by the villainous "Black Hawk." The play is even more dramatic than the book and for the first time the theater-goer of this city will have the opportunity of seeing the very best of Ouida's work.

Some Men in Norway That Are Guiding the People

First of All Comes That Great Norwegian, Bjornson—Nansen Takes Deep Interest in Affairs of His Country.

NORWAY is not lacking for able men in these days of change in Scandinavia, but two names stand forth to the eyes of the world with special prominence—that of the poet and philosopher, novelist and dramatist, Bjornson; that of the explorer, Nansen. Their fame was made ere they took to the field of politics; because of this fame where they stand gives authority to the cause espoused.

They uphold Norwegian independence. Bjornson speaks thus of the action taken by the storting: "The address to the king is the voice of the entire Norwegian nation. The dissolution of the union is the greatest blessing to all northern people." Nansen, who declares the joint consular service has been used to subordinate Norwegian interests to those of Sweden, is using his influence on the side of separation, al-in pursuit of this favorite sport. Prince Waldemar is just a trifle older than Prince Oscar. He has four sons and a daughter, his wife was Princess Marie d'Orleans, daughter of Duc de Chartres. Another prince that was early mentioned is Prince William, grandson of King Oscar, second son of Crown Prince Gustav. It was thought the placing of any one of these princes at the head of the Norwegian state would be a strong reason for the friendship of Norway's neighbors.

To return to the consideration of a few of the men in Norway that have been influencing public opinion. Michelsen, chosen head of the provisional government, for about 12 years, has been leader of the liberal party. He is looked upon as the type of the progressive, practical man of affairs. He has practiced law, been head of his father's large ship-building interests, and has taken time from business responsibilities for the service of his country. It was largely through Mr. Michelsen's influence that Norway obtained a jury system similar to that of the United States, and another reform he successfully labored for was the extension of the suffrage. Norway now has universal manhood suffrage. (By the way, a much larger percent of the women in Norway vote than of the women in this country.) Since his election to the storting in 1903, Mr. Michelsen has been conspicuous in Scandinavian politics. He was a member of the Hagerup-Ibsen cabinet at Stockholm, then was recalled to Christiania to assume the duties of finance minister. On the resignation of the Hagerup ministry, he was asked to form a cabinet, and was made prime minister. He is now 48 years of age.

though, it is reported, he thinks the matter may have to be settled by war.

In contemplation of this solution of the problem, it may be in place to refer to the comparative strength of the two nations. An article in the London Spectator phrases it: "The Swedes outnumber the Norwegians two to one, are much the wealthier, and are full of the historic military pride which helps so to make good soldiers."

To offset Sweden's marked advantages, the character of the inhabitants of the smaller country is brought forward, we are called upon to keep in mind the fact that the Norwegians are such a sturdy, intelligent, independent people. An authority, Mulhail, speaks of them as the most independent people in the world. The above-quoted article in the Spectator, deprecating the Sweden-Norway break, says: "Though we admire the Norwegians as a people who are among the few capable of self-government, we think them entirely wrong in staking their own future and the peace of the world upon the struggle for a dignity which will bring them so little reward."

When news came that Norway had announced its withdrawal from the union, and the news was accompanied by word of the inclination of state to make overtures towards placing as ruler over Norway either a Bernadotte prince or a son of the royal house of Denmark, doubtless the first thought of the American reader was, Why another king; why not a republic at once? To this may be made answer that Norway feels the need of the support of the European nations, and appreciates the probability that monarchy and empire would look askance on a Norwegian republic, would be more inclined to the conservatism of a monarchy—monarchy and empire not desiring any spread of republicanism.

Let us glance for a moment at the various princes suggested as eligible. Three royal princes received prior attention—Oscar, second son of the Swedish monarch; Carl, third son; Waldemar, sixth child and second son of the king of Denmark. The first, who has been called "the royal evangelist," is very religious, and with his wife, is greatly interested in evangelistic work. It was the common interest in religious matters that directed Oscar to marriage with a lady beneath him in rank, plain Ebla Munck, and which marriage was accompanied by the renouncing of all claims to the Swedish throne. Many Norwegians look upon Oscar, because of his surrender of right of succession to Sweden's throne, particularly eligible to take the place as Norway's ruler. Oscar is 46 years old. He has no children.

His brother Carl, his junior by a little over a year, has two children, both girls. His wife was Princess Ingeborg, daughter of Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark. Carl is noted for his fondness for hunting, and has traveled far and wide been constrained to feel that he was the mouth-piece of their race, as no other Norwegian before him had been, and that he was voicing whatever is deepest and most enduring in the Norwegian temper." The later period of his life has been marked by keen interest in political and social subjects; he has labored for the separation of Norway from the dual monarchy.

Nansen and Sven Hedin, the Swedish explorer and politician, have been engaged in battle royal—a pen tilt—in the London Times. Sven Hedin remarks with asperity: "Let nobody believe that Norway has restricted her endeavor solely and alone to the procuring of her own consul." Nansen talks back, calls to his opponent's attention: "That Sweden some years ago began to adopt a system of high tariff while Norway remained practically a free trade country, the resultant divergence in fiscal policy causing the existing consular system to become an instrument for the subordination of Norwegian interests to those of Sweden."

Strictly Vegetarian Eggs. A vegetarian had an amusing experience the other morning while at breakfast. His family was out of town, and he went to a restaurant and took a seat next to a stranger.

The vegetarian took occasion to advertise his creed by telling the stranger that all meat was injurious and that the human diet should be strictly vegetarian. "But," replied the stranger, "I seldom eat meat."

"You just ordered eggs," said the vegetarian. "An egg is practically meat, because it eventually becomes a bird."

"The kind of eggs I eat never become birds," answered the stranger quietly. "Good heavens!" cried the vegetarian, "what kind of eggs do you eat?"

"Principally boiled eggs," said the stranger.—New Haven Register.

MENTOR DISASTER

New York Central Withdraws Fastest Train in the World.

Twenty-One Mangled and Burned

All Dead Were Men, Many Prominent in New York and Cleveland. Officials Positive Express Was Deliberately Wrecked.

NEW YORK, June 23.—President W. H. Newman of the New York Central and Lake Shore railroads has issued the following:

"Since the sad accident which has happened on the Lake Shore I have had a consultation with the operating officials, who have explained that the accident was caused by a misplaced switch and was not due to the speed of the train, and they assure me that the present schedule can be safely and easily maintained.

"While I agree with the operating officials that there is no physical reason why the schedule should not be continued, nevertheless in my judgment the time of the Twentieth Century Limited should be restored to twenty hours, and it will be done at once."

The fatality list of the Mentor wreck of the Twentieth Century Limited train has been practically fixed at twenty-one lives. All the dead were men and all were passengers in the buffet car. Of the twenty-one, seventeen have been positively identified, and the other four are in doubt. The underclothing on one of the latter bodies bears the initials "E. E. N."

It is believed that all the dead have been removed from the scene of the wreck, the railway company bending every effort toward clearing away the wreckage as soon as possible. This work has proceeded so far by this time that the possibility of there being additional bodies buried in the debris is very slight.

The Twentieth Century Limited is called the fastest long distance train in the world. It ran into an open switch. Officials of the Lake Shore road are positive in their declarations that the switch had been maliciously opened, and all the evidence at hand supports this theory.

It is said that investigation has developed that a boy meddled with the switch at Mentor and caused the wreck. William Usher and James Barnes reached the wreck twenty minutes after it occurred. On the way to the wreck they met a boy carrying a lantern. The boy said that he had been down to shut a switch. The men went on to the wreck and found the switch open and locked. The men are of the opinion that the boy thought that there was a freight ahead of the Twentieth Century and opened the switch to let it through to take a siding.

Another report says that the police of Mentor are looking for a local character considered slightly demented who had been heard to say that he would be revenged for what he considered ill treatment on the Lake Shore road.

Twelve persons were injured, some being seriously burned.

The train was destroyed, flames aiding in the destruction, and several of the passengers were burned to death. Nearly all of the injured were burned.

The dead are: S. C. Beckwith, New York; John R. Bennett, patent attorney, New York city, burned to death; F. J. Brandt, Toledo, trainman; J. H. Gibson, Chicago, traveler; Fireman Graham, Collinwood, crushed under engine; Archibald P. Head, London, steel company representative; Thomas R. Morgan of the Wellman-Seaver-Morgan company, Cleveland, burned to death; A. L. Rodgers, general manager Platt Iron company, New York; died on operating table at Cleveland General hospital; Allen Tyler, Collinwood, O., engineer, crushed under engine; N. B. Walters, baggage man of Hamburg, N. Y., scalded to death; Charles H. Wellman of the Wellman-Seaver-Morgan company, Cleveland; Williams, first name and address unknown; H. H. Wright, traveling man, Chicago; H. C. Meekling, manager of the Wheeling Corrugating company, New York; L. M. Elrick, manager Keith's theater, Cleveland; E. E. Naugle, Chicago.

One of the passengers who arrived on the limited was William Barclay Parsons, former engineer of the New York subway. Mr. Parsons had a narrow escape from death in the wreck.
